6. ponder — Vegeta says he's had ample time to ponder this strategy
7. defiant — describes his body language when he refuses to run
8. shrewd — Gohan calls the plan shrewd, showing good judgement

7 Exercise 7: Register & Formality

Part A: Formal vs. Informal Contexts

1. B) ponder

Why: "Ponder" is more formal and literary, appropriate for business presentations. "Think about" is too casual, "check out" is slang.

2. B) suckered

Why: "Suckered" is informal slang, perfect for casual text messages. "Deceived" and "beguiled" are too formal for this context.

3. C) sluggish

Why: "Sluggish" is the standard economics term for slow growth. "Slow" is too basic, "lazy" is informal and personifies the economy inappropriately.

4. C) lurked

Why: "Lurked" has sinister connotations perfect for fantasy writing. "Waited" and "stayed" are too neutral and lack atmosphere.

Part B: Word Pairs — When to Use Each

5. ponder vs. think about

"Ponder" is more formal/literary, implying deeper, prolonged thought. "Think about" is everyday usage, neutral register. Use "ponder" in writing, formal speech; "think about" in casual conversation.

6. ample vs. enough

"Ample" is more formal and emphasizes generosity/abundance (more than sufficient). "Enough" is neutral and just means sufficient. "Ample parking" sounds professional; "enough parking" is conversational.

7. defiant vs. stubborn

"Defiant" implies active resistance against authority—often heroic or dramatic. "Stubborn" is more neutral/negative, suggesting unreasonable inflexibility. A rebel is defiant; a child refusing vegetables is stubborn.

8. ominous vs. scary

"Ominous" is literary, suggests foreboding about future events—atmospheric and sophisticated. "Scary" is casual, immediate, and often childlike. "Ominous clouds" is literary; "scary movie" is everyday speech.

8 Exercise 8: Listening Comprehension Prompts

Reader's Script — Read These Aloud

If you are the reader/teacher, use this page to read the sentences aloud. The listener should write down the vocabulary word they hear.

Part A: Single Word Identification — Full Sentences to Read

1. "The complexity of the human brain is absolutely mind-boggling."

Answer: boggling

2. "Someone was lurking in the alley behind the restaurant."

Answer: lurking

3. "She's been holding a grudge against him since high school."

Answer: grudge

4. "The economy has been quite sluggish this quarter."

Answer: sluggish

5. "He made a shrewd investment decision that paid off."

Answer: shrewd

6. "There's ample evidence to support the theory."

Answer: ample

7. "The sky looked ominous before the hurricane hit."

Answer: ominous

8. "She remained defiant despite the pressure to conform."

Answer: defiant

Part B: Dictation Practice — Full Sentences to Read

Read each sentence twice at normal speed. The listener writes the entire sentence.

9. Read: "The guerrillas ambushed the convoy near the mountain pass."

Key word: ambushed — past tense, note the -ed ending

10. Read: "I need more time to ponder this difficult decision."

Key word: ponder — base form after "to"

11. Read: "Don't let them sucker you into buying unnecessary insurance."

Key word: sucker — informal verb, note double consonant

12. Read: "Are you acquainted with the new safety regulations?"

Key word: acquainted — note the "acq-" beginning

9 Exercise 9: Trap Sentences — Spot the Misuse

1. "I need to ponder quickly about what to order for lunch."
Error: "ponder quickly" is contradictory
Why: "Ponder" implies slow, deep, prolonged thought. You cannot ponder "quickly" — that defeats the word's meaning.
Better: "decide quickly" or "think quickly"
2. "The cheerful music created an ominous atmosphere at the birthday party."
Error: Semantic contradiction
Why: "Ominous" means threatening/foreboding. Cheerful music creates the opposite effect. The sentence contradicts itself.
Better: "festive" or "joyful" atmosphere
3. "After drinking three cups of coffee, I felt very sluggish and energetic."
Error: "sluggish and energetic" are opposites
Why: You can't be sluggish AND energetic. Coffee typically makes you energetic, not sluggish.
Better: "alert and energetic" OR remove "sluggish" entirely
4. "She lurked openly in the middle of the crowded plaza."
Error: "lurked openly" is contradictory
Why: "Lurk" means to hide secretly, wait in concealment. You cannot lurk "openly" — that's impossible by definition.
Better: "stood" or "waited" openly
5. "He made a shrewd decision by investing all his money in a random cryptocurrency without research."
Error: Action contradicts "shrewd"
Why: "Shrewd" means showing good judgement. Investing randomly without research is the opposite of shrewd — it's foolish.
Better: "reckless" or "foolish" decision
6. "The obedient student was very defiant and always followed the rules."
Error: "defiant" contradicts "obedient" and "followed the rules"
Why: "Defiant" means refusing to obey. An obedient, rule-following student is the opposite of defiant.
Better: "compliant" or "cooperative"

7. "We had ample time—only 30 seconds to complete the entire exam."

Error: 30 seconds is not "ample"

Why: "Ample" means more than enough. 30 seconds for an entire exam is extremely insufficient, not ample.

Better: "barely any time" or "insufficient time"

8. "The soldiers launched a surprise ambush by marching openly down the main road in broad daylight."

Error: Open marching contradicts "ambush"

Why: An "ambush" requires hiding and surprise. Marching openly in daylight eliminates the surprise element entirely.

Better: "attack" or "assault" — or describe hiding before the ambush

10 Exercise 10: Error Correction

1. sluggishly → sluggish

Explanation: After "felt" (linking verb), use an adjective, not an adverb.

2. lurked → lurking

Explanation: Present perfect continuous requires -ing form: "has been lurking"

3. defiantly → defiant

Explanation: "Look" is a noun here, requiring an adjective modifier: "a defiant look"

4. grudging → grudge

Explanation: The expression is "hold a grudge" (noun), not "hold a grudging" (adjective)

5. acquaint → acquainted

Explanation: "Become acquainted" requires the past participle adjective form

6. amply → ample

Explanation: "Time" is a noun, requiring an adjective modifier: "ample time"

7. ambushed on → ambushed

Explanation: "Ambush" is transitive; no preposition needed: "ambushed the convoy"

8. pondering → ponder

Explanation: After "to" (infinitive marker), use base form: "to ponder"

11 Exercise 11: Translation & Production

Part A: English to Portuguese (Model Answers)

1. A complexidade alucinante/espantosa do universo continua a surpreender os cientistas.
2. Ela guardou rancor/mágoa contra ele por anos após a discussão deles.
3. As nuvens ameaçadoras/sinistras sugeriam que uma tempestade terrível estava se aproximando.
4. Ele era astuto/sagaz demais para cair na lábia enganosa de vendas deles.
5. O governo tentou desviar a atenção pública do escândalo.

Part B: Portuguese to English (Model Answers)

6. He felt very sluggish and heavy after the meal.
7. The guerrillas ambushed them near the bridge.
8. I'm not personally acquainted with her.
9. There is ample free parking available.
10. Someone was lurking in the shadows.

Part C: Sentence Creation (Model Answers)

11. pester: My little brother kept pestering me to play video games with him until I finally gave in.
12. defiant: Despite the teacher's warnings, the defiant student continued to use her phone in class.
13. sucker (verb): The scammers suckered elderly people into giving them their bank details.
14. stunt (noun): The motorcycle stunt in the James Bond film required months of practice.
15. outrageous: The restaurant charged an outrageous $50 for a simple salad.

12 Exercise 12: Advanced Reading & Analysis

1. Irony with "shrewd":

The irony is that Marcus considers himself shrewd, but the story immediately reveals he was "suckered" — the opposite of shrewd behaviour. The author sets up the reader's expectation with "shrewd" then subverts it, highlighting Marcus's overconfidence and the gap between self-perception and reality.

2. Connotation of "lurking":

"Lurking" has predatory, sinister connotations — it suggests something hiding with malicious intent, like a predator waiting for prey. This foreshadows that the con artists will "attack" (scam) victims. The word choice immediately signals danger and sets an ominous tone.

3. Marcus's emotional/physical state:

Two words: "sluggish" and "ominous" (thoughts). "Sluggish" shows his physical depression — lacking energy, unable to move forward. "Ominous thoughts" suggests dark, threatening mental states. Together they reinforce total loss — both physical vitality and mental wellbeing have been destroyed.

4. Family reactions comparison:

- Marcus: sluggish, uncertain, acquainted with failure — passive, defeated
- Wife: holds a grudge — focused on resentment toward the con artists
- Daughter: defiant — actively resistant, optimistic, refusing to accept defeat

The vocabulary shows three different coping mechanisms: depression, anger, and resilience.

5. "Outrageous" — positive or negative:

Negative in context. While "outrageous" can sometimes mean impressively excessive (like "outrageous fashion"), here it means unbelievably unrealistic/suspicious. The 300% returns were so outrageously high that they should have been a red flag. The word emphasizes that the offer was too good to be true — anyone less greedy would have recognized the warning sign.
